B. F. Noble, a tramp, acted this morning very much as if he had never been in police court before. He was charged with being drunk, and admitted that he had been drinking but said he was not drunk.

"Your honor, won't you give me a chance to get out of town," he implored.

"Well, I have a notion to discharge you."

"Will you, judge? How shall I go, shall I walk or wait for a train?"

"Oh, go any way you can," responded the judge.

"Which way can I get out of here?" anxiously inquired the excited prisoner.

He was shown the door and left the prison as if he had been discharged from a gun.

A LOVELY LADY'S SECRET.

She Talks Very Frankly and Earnestly to the Writer.

JUST WHAT SHE SAYS.

One of the Most Serious of Conditions and How Light Came Out of Darkness.

On the afternoon of Sunday, January 7th, the writer gave interested attention to the narration which follows. It is here reproduced almost exactly in the words of the lady from whose lips it fell—Mrs. S. B. Cook, of 250 Tompkins avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. Her husband, Mr. S. B. Cook, has for many years held a responsible position in the Registered Letter Department of the New York Postoffice.

We three sat at the front windows of their home overlooking the park, as Mrs. Cook gave this leaflet out of her life, one of her little children nestling against her knee.

Should confirmation of our report be desired, Mr. Cook will respond to any inquiries that may be addressed to him.

"To make my story plain," said the lady, "I shall have to go back just a year—to January, 1893. It was then I began to feel badly. There was nothing like what is commonly called an 'attack' of any particular disease. No, my trouble came on very much as summer changes into autumn. The trees were green, now they are brown; it was like that; no sharp symptoms, no sudden collapse. It was fading and sinking down. All women will understand what that means. 'I felt tired, weak and exhausted. No, it was not from overwork or worry. The life and strength seemed to be passing from me, I couldn't tell why. To get up and down stairs was a hard task for me. I became so weak that on any exertion I would almost faint away. All my hopes of gaining strength by eating were failures. My appetite was listless, and food distressed me.

"Perhaps I really ought to date my illness further back than last January. I will give you the facts, and people can judge for themselves.

"My husband and I have been married nine years. Before my marriage I was troubled a great deal with indigestion and dyspepsia, and sometimes since, would be well for three months and then sick two or three months off and on. This was the history of several years—indeed, of many years. Four years ago I had a serious time with that complaint, sleeping badly and suffering all the symptoms that are so much written about. I couldn't eat any solid food. I lived on boiled milk, taken hot, right off the stove. That was my diet, and I got very tired of it; but I was afraid to touch anything else. I say I had years of this sort of thing, and possibly it may make what I am going to tell you easier to understand, or it may not. However, it is part of the truth.

"Now to get back to the year 1893, last year, a long and sad one for me. As the warm weather came in I hoped to get better, but did not. The opening buds on the trees out there in the yard for me as weak, low and miserable as I had been in the winter. I was losing flesh and strength, slowly but surely, all the time. My nerves were feeble and shaken so that my sleep was habitually bad. During the warm nights in June I often left my bed and sat by the window and looked out. When one can't sleep, almost any diversion is better than to lie in bed waiting for the clock to let you know that another hour has dragged by.

"Well, there is no need to dwell on this part of my experience. I was running down, and nothing that could be done here in Brooklyn appeared likely to help me. My relatives live in Peekskill on the Hudson, and to them I went early in July, taking our three children and leaving my husband to attend to his work in New York, and to take care of our home here.

"Peekskill lies on the hills, and, oh how fresh the air is! It was in hope of benefit from that, and from the change of scene, that I went there. But I was destined to be disappointed. The country, even with all the beauty and glory of summer upon it, was no better for me than the city. In the midst of it all I was the same weak and weary woman. The slightest exertion tired me, and any continued effort made me faint. About the first of August I broke down altogether and took to my bed. When I entered my room I little thought it would be three long months before I should come out of it. Yet that was my fate. It was a dreary imprisonment, lightened only by what kind friends and the best of medical attention could effect. Now and then they got me up to have the bed made, and to rest me; but I couldn't sit up long.

"Yes, I took nourishment, of course, broths, soups, etc., and kept alive on them; but lost flesh just the same and got weaker—that is, if I could be any weaker.

"My friends saw I was growing thinner, and expressed the opinion to one another that I was in a decline.

"The doctor suggested that I take cod liver oil, but I told him I couldn't bear the looks or the taste of it, either in its natural state or as an emulsion. He looked grave at this but said no more about it. So I lay there and lingered and sank; that is all there is to say of the result of my trip to the country."

"Every time I went up to visit my wife," said Mr. Cook, "I could see she was much thinner and more feeble than before, although she didn't like to admit it."

"Well," continued the lady, "I felt that if it were physically possible I must get home, and so, on the 3d of November they wrapped me up and brought me home, the next day after my return my husband brought me a bottle of something called Paskola, a pre-digested food, and said a friend of his recommended it and hoped I would try it. I tasted it and it tasted good, nothing like cod liver oil. I began taking it according to the directions without feeling the least confidence in it or indulging any hope from it. But it did have a good effect, and that quickly. It gave me an appetite.

"I could eat the old kinds of food, and they didn't distress me. Then I began to get some strength. At the end of a week, to my surprise and delight, I found I had gained two pounds. At the end of the second week, two more. And so on, gaining two pounds every week.

"It is eight weeks now, and I weigh 114 pounds, just 16 pounds more than when I came home. I can eat anything, have no pain, no cough, no headache, can run upstairs like a girl, and if there is any more disease about me I am not aware of it."

"And you think Paskola did all this for you, Mr. Cook?"

"Certainly; if it didn't, what did?" I have taken nothing else for over two months, and I am well, as you can see. I never felt so well, and like living, in ten years as I do now. I have just got back from a visit to my Peekskill friends and they had no trouble to see the difference.

"Isn't my wife's increase in weight alone," remarked Mr. Cook, "but look at her! her strength! her enjoyment of herself! her bright spirits! She had none of those things till Paskola gave them to her. If it can do as much for other people, through her statement being published, why it ought to be published."

"What my husband says, I say," added Mrs. Cook, "anything less would be ingratitude on my part and culpable indifference to the suffering of others."

have not flesh to feed the vital fire? Are you weak because your food is not assimilated? Are you slowly sinking like a scuttled ship? Millions are. Abandon the use of drugs and medicines, and test the successful modern scientific treatment. Paskola is a food, and enables the system to use all other food. It arrests emaciation, re-establishes nutrition, fills up the hollow cheeks, and out of weakness develops power.

A pamphlet giving full particulars respecting Paskola will be sent on application to the Pre-Digested Food Co., 83 Washburn St., N. Y. City.
